THREE ACT AS ESCORT

Flies To Washington in Army
Fast Pursuit
Plane

By James L. Kilgallen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, June 16.—Dressed in evening clothes, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived at Mitchell Field at 7.47 o'clock this morning from Washington in his beloved "Spirit of St. Louis." He had unexpectedly departed for Washington at 2.59 this morning (daylight time) in a fast army pursuit plane to get his own trans-Atlantic monoplane.

Lindbergh circled Mitchell Field several times before he descended. As he slipped out of the cockpit he wore a broad grin and seemed to have greatly enjoyed his spectacular and unexpected flight to the capital.

He made the trip to Washington in one hour and fifty-nine minutes and came back in two hours and thirty-seven minutes, apparently having spent some time cruising about.

"Lindy" had had no sleep but he was as fresh as a daisy when he landed.

Lindbergh's departure for Washington came suddenly. At 1.50 this morning he slipped away from Roxy's Theatre, while 6,000 persons in the audience sat content in the belief that he was still sitting in the front row. He was in evening clothes.

He and a personal friend and adviser, Richard R. Blythe, slipped out a side exit and soon were speeding by automobile to the flying fields of Long Island. A telephone call to the duty officer at Mitchell Field warned him "Lindy" was en route.

A swift army pursuit plane was waiting for him. Only a few reporters were at the field. "Lindy" smiled and remarked, "I almost gave you fellows the slip that time."

Hastily donning a leather jacket, he jumped into the plane.

"So long," he cried. "I'll be back by 8 o'clock."

The motor whirled.

In less than a minute the famous New York-to-Paris flyer was off into the bright moonlight, picking up speed as he flew into the air. Soon only the faint drumming of the motor could be heard as "Lindy" winged his way to get the other half of "we."

On the spectacular flight to Washington, Lindbergh had with him as escort Captain Sinclair Street. "Lindy" was flying a Curtiss army pursuit ship, the one he used Monday to fly from Bolling Field, Washington.

There were no lights on Lindbergh's plane as it soared into the night but Captain Street's airship carried navigation lights so he led the way. Lindbergh was guided by the lights.

"Lindy" took his time coming back. It had been thought at Mitchell Field he might land around 7.30 or before, and when he did not arrive at that time army officials began to think he had changed his plans and had landed elsewhere.

But at 7.45 the famous "Spirit of St. Louis" was sighted swooping gracefully toward the field, with Lindbergh at the controls and followed by three other airships. "Lindy" was in the lead of the formation, followed by Captain Street in his plane and two navy pursuit planes bringing up the rear.

Before he came down, "Lindy," as if jubilant over his stunt, broke out of formation and went into a series of fancy formations. "The Spirit of St. Louis" made a pretty picture as its silver sides glinted in the bright morning sunlight. It looped and dived, sidebanked and turned over on its back with the expert fingers controlling its movements.

Aviators and mechanics on the ground applauded the buoyant spirit reflected in "Lindy's" dizzy gyrations of the ship.

And then suddenly, the famous ship dived for the landing field. Some of the observers started to run toward the plane but it suddenly zoomed up with an increased roar and sailed straight up into the sky.

"Lindy" was having a grand time. Away from the roar of the crowds he was enjoying himself.

A few minutes later he came down gracefully to a perfect landing.

But "Lindy" didn't stay down. As his plane came down lightly on its landing wheels, the motors began to roar again and up he rose, and soon he was in high altitude again, into another series of ecstatic stunts. He turned over lazily as if he was enjoying the sheer luxury of the reunion with "we."

"I sure had a grand time," he exclaimed when he finally came to earth.

Lindbergh was enthusiastically greeted by a number of West Point cadets, several aviators, some army officers and a few civilians who had been "in on" his secret flight.

Russell H. Vandegrift
Weds Miss Arensmeyer

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Arensmeyer, of 823 Pond street, announce the marriage of their daughter, Evelyn, to Mr. Russell H. Vandegrift, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Vandegrift, of 322 Cleveland street, on Monday at 4.15 p. m. in the Methodist Parsonage by the Rev. John Ellery, pastor of the church.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Marian Arensmeyer, as bridesmaid, while Mr. Edgar Opydyke, of Cedar street, acted as best man.

Mrs. Vandegrift was gowned in a powder blue georgette frock, a long-waisted model with cape back, and a white picture hat and wore light gray colored silk stockings and black patent leather pumps. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and white carnations.

Miss Arensmeyer, the bridesmaid, wore a becoming tan colored georgette gown, a close fitting tan colored hat and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and pink carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception and wedding supper was tendered the bride party and their relatives at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Arensmeyer, of 823 Pond street.

Mr. and Mrs. Vandegrift have taken up their residence with Mr. Vandegrift's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Vandegrift, of 322 Cleveland street.

"SAINTS" SCORE SIX;
SHUT OUT HARRIMAN

Fields Again in Hitting Form;
Van Sciver and Gilardi
Make Slick Catches

KOHLER STAR OF TEAM

(By "Scotty")

It wasn't Pitcher Kohler's fault that the Harriman nine went down to defeat to the tune of 6 to 0 against St. Ann's on the latter's field last night, or he struck out ten men in six innings, three of them in succession in the fourth. He also slammed out the best hit of the game in the second when he hit beyond left field for the only two-bagger of the contest.

The game was of a fast calibre, and on no occasion were "Red" Waters' decisions questioned, even though there were several close plays, especially when McGill in the fourth, with two and three full and only one out, hit to second for a single, Satterthwaite failing to make home for a run by the fraction of a second.

Two slick catches were features of the game, and brought applause from the 400 fans. In the second inning, Castor shot out a hot one meant for the canal, but Van Sciver, on first, intercepted the ball in his flight with a lightning-like move of his gloved mit and held it fast. In the seventh, Holden slugged hard to left field, the ball traveling about five feet in the air. Gilardi made a forward jump and with both hands held the ball. B. Missera distinguished himself at center field, being credited with four put outs.

Came by innings:

FIRST
McGill hit to pitcher and was put out at first; Karp took same course; Brooks struck out. r h e 0 0 0

Gilardi struck out; F. Missera walked, and on overthrow made second; Fields hit to third, advancing Missera to third, himself stealing to second; Romeo walked; Riola, with bases full, hit over short for a single, bringing in Missera and Fields; Di Risi hit past short, was put out at second, but brought in Romeo and Riola; B. Missera struck out. r h e 4 3 0

SECOND
Kohler slugged a hot one beyond left field for a two-bagger; Cooper hit to pitcher, was safe at first, Kohler being tripped between second and third and tagged trying to get back to second; Yorty hit to second and on error was safe at first, Cooper advancing to second; Van Sciver struck out; Satterthwaite fled to center. r h e 0 1 1

Palerm struck out; Castor hit out a fast drive to first, Van Sciver making a slick catch; Gilardi struck out. r h e 0 0 0

THIRD
Holden flied to center field; McGill hit to pitcher and was put out at first; Karp hit to pitcher and on error was safe; Brooks flied to first. r h e 0 0 1

Missera hit to second and on error was safe at first; Fields struck out; Romeo hit to center field; Riola hit to pitcher, Missera going out at third; Di Risi struck out. r h e 0 1 1

LATE NEWS

PITTSBURGH, June 16 (I.N.S.)—Police and detectives here today were searching for an automobile load of would-be assassins who late yesterday drove past a parked automobile in which two men were sitting, opened fire with a machine gun and spat bullets at the occupants of the vehicle. All the shots were wild, police said, due to the rapid rate of speed at which the attacking automobile was running.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., June 16 (I.N.S.)—The first fatality due to baseball in Lawrence County in several years occurred at Wampum when Charles Morrow, 22, catcher for the Newport team, was almost instantly killed when struck over the heart by a foul tip. He was catching without a protector, according to advices received here.

KIWANIS CLUB HOST TO GRADUATING CLASS

Students of Doylestown High School Are Entertained At Dinner

A PLEASANT PROGRAM

DOYLESTOWN, June 16.—Over sixty members of the graduating class of the Doylestown High School were entertained at the Doylestown Inn by the members of the Kiwanis Club of Doylestown at the weekly dinner meeting. Like other "graduate night" meetings, the affair last night was greatly enjoyed and described as one of the outstanding meetings of the year.

"The sweet young girl graduates and the snappy and alert-looking young men," as they were described by the master of ceremonies, Kiwanian Wynne James, helped to furnish part of the program with class songs and selections by the glee club of mixed voices.

Kiwanian Wynne James, chairman of the reception committee, and Kiwanian Horace B. High, of the house committee were responsible for the program. The master of ceremonies was introduced by Vice-President Hiram H. Keller.

Good advice and humor filled a very fine address given by Leigh Mitchell Hodges, of Doylestown, following a welcome that was extended to the graduates by Kiwanian James.

Very clever were the opening remarks of the speaker who told the graduates what Kiwanians Keller, Hady and Ross had asked him to say in the way of greetings to the graduates, the entire affair being a surprise not only to the graduates but to all the Kiwanians.

In a more serious vein Mr. Hodges declared he could say very little to the graduates of Doylestown High that had not already been said by the fine speakers who have in the past, appeared in the local schools.

"As for myself," he continued, "I believe the youth problem of today is not a serious one. I like the frankness of youth today. Of course, not many of them like to work, but sooner or later they will."

"I think possibly, however, there might be instilled in the youth of today a slightly larger measure of spirit and faith. I admire the youth of today for many things, but there is something that goes deeper into the surface that should be improved—a larger measure of faith."

"We have never contributed to the world any greater outstanding thing I believe, than the feat of Colonel Lindbergh. It was part of your work, for it was a youth whose outstanding character gave to the world an example that will go down in history."

"The thing that Colonel Lindbergh really did is little compared to what Colonel Lindbergh actually is himself. He is the finest ambassador of all nations. He came back to America several days ago with his character intact simply because he knew how to handle himself. He had a large measure of faith and plenty of spirit."

"What you are within, is what counts. It is not your outward appearance. There is a tremendous demand in the business and professional world today for young folks who are thinking of what they have within them rather than what they have on the outside. There is a vital call for men and women of high spirit and courage."

"There is a grave danger of a surplus of prosperity in this country today. To combat this there must be a higher spiritual vision."

FUNERAL CHANGED

The funeral of the late Howard Conover will be held Saturday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock instead of at two o'clock as was previously announced.

Miss Eleanor Campbell, of Edgely, Pa., spent Saturday and Sunday in Pottstown, Pa., visiting Miss Ruth Quinter.

LANDER H. DODDS WEDS
MISS FLORENCE TANNER

Ceremony Takes Place in The Primitive M. E. Church,
Philadelphia

THEY WILL RESIDE HERE

Last evening at six o'clock Miss Florence I. Tanner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Tanner, 231 Lafayette street, and Lander H. Dodds, Charlotte, N. C., were united in marriage. The ceremony took place in the Primitive M. E. Church, 26th and Lehigh, Philadelphia. The Rev. Nichols officiated.

The bride wore white satin trimmed with lace, white veil and a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet.

Miss Nellie Wilkinson, of Philadelphia, was bridesmaid and she wore pink satin with a picture hat to match and carried a shower bouquet.

The matron-of-honor was Mrs. E. O. Sloan, aunt of the bride. Her gown was ivory satin and she wore a picture hat to match and carried a shower bouquet.

The best man was Glenn Dodds, New York, brother of the groom.

The bride was given away by her father.

Following the ceremony there was a reception held at the home of the bride's aunt, 1633 N. Franklin street, Philadelphia, after which the newly wedded couple left for Atlantic City. Upon their return from their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Dodds will reside with the parents of the bride here.

Dr. Tilman Hobson To Be At Simpson Grove

The leading preacher at Simpson Grove Camp Meeting, July 15th to 25th, will be Dr. Tilman Hobson, of Pasadena, California. Dr. Hobson has been engaged in such work for many years and with most remarkable success. He comes with the highest commendations of such noted Friends leaders as David Hadley, president of the California Yearly Meeting. It has been said that Evangelist Hobson is to the Friends Church what D. L. Moody was to the Congregational Church and what J. Wilbur Chapman was to the Presbyterian Church.

Both pulpit and press accord him high praise for his masterful oratory and his utter lack of anything that is akin to sensationalism. He is a plain man and intensely sincere and devout.

The board of managers feels that the whole community will appreciate his wisdom in securing this great leader for the camp meeting. The local church at Trevese and the summer colony are making elaborate preparation under the leadership of Rev. Alexander B. Davidson, pastor, and are expecting unusual interest to be manifested in the camp meeting this summer.

Fire Destroys Newspaper
And Ice Cream Plants

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., June 16 (I.N.S.)—The newspaper plant of the Brownsville Publishing Co., publishers of the morning and evening Telegraph here, was in ruins today following a fire of undetermined origin which destroyed the building late yesterday with the plant of the Hagen Ice Cream Manufacturing Co., and a two-story frame garage with a loss estimated at more than $150,000.

The fire was discovered coming from a paper stock room of the Telegraph building by Harry McCamic, managing editor, as he reported for work. He immediately sounded an alarm and more than 30 men and women employees of the paper were forced to flee as the flames spread to the ice cream plant and the editorial rooms of the Telegraph building.

Three firemen, Howard Livingston, Robert Davis, and Lawrence Dawson, of the Brownsville fire department, were slightly injured when a roof timber caved in on them while attempting to save equipment in the composing room. They were given first aid and then returned to duty.

—Mrs. Joseph Cooper, of Bath street, is making an extended visit with friends in Ashbury Park.

—Mrs. Harry Kemble, of Florence, N. J., was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Thompson, of Radcliffe street, on Monday.

DANGER OF AIR WARS

Not everybody looks upon the Lindbergh and Chamberlin transatlantic flights as cause for satisfaction and achievements promising many social and commercial benefits.

While the many were viewing the bridging of the Atlantic as sporting events with great human appeal or with the eyes of the aeronautical engineer, there were some few alarmists who seriously believed the time had come when any foreign power could send a fleet of airships across the Atlantic to lay waste the United States. Lindbergh had no sooner landed triumphantly in Paris than these "nervous wrecks" were seeing visions of invading planes dropping bombs on New York City.

The fact is that the two transatlantic flights, if they have proved anything, have proved that there has not yet been developed an airplane that can cross the Atlantic with more than the most essential supplies and equipment.

His own experience has set Lindbergh to speculating on the size and mechanism of the "ship of the future" that will make transoceanic air travel commercially safe and economical. His optimism goes no farther than vague predictions that some day passengers and express will cross the Atlantic by air and an invading fleet of bombing or transport planes might be a real threat to an enemy country on the other bank of the ocean.

Perhaps before either of Lindbergh's probabilities become a fact the civilization of man will have advanced to that stage where all nations will have learned the folly of war.

HANDS OFF IN CHINA

From the beginning of the civil war in China the American minister at Peking has joined with the envoys of other foreign powers in advocating an aggressive policy. If his advice had been adopted the United States would have agreed to the program proposed by the powers, and by this time it probably would have been at war with China.

There is no occasion or excuse for war between the United States and any Chinese faction. In the chaotic condition of civil war it is incumbent upon foreigners to keep hands off. The United States has no territory threatened with invasion. Its sole interest in China is the protection of the lives and property of American citizens.

Since it is impossible to provide military protection to every American in China, the alternative plan has been followed—Americans have been warned to leave the interior and make their way to the coast.

Though it is hard for corporations and individuals made refugees and financial losers, this country should make no military move in China beyond that necessary for the protection of her citizens. It is a question whether any foreign power can morally go farther in the protection of the property of its citizens than guarding it while in process of removal from the war-torn country.

The United States must not be a party to such colossal folly as that contemplated by those powers advocating war to regain their lost concessions in China.

There are just two philosophies of life: Do unto others and do others.

And many people think they are good merely because they are tired of sinning.

HOUSES—

that can be made into HOMES

Two-story brick residences containing six rooms and bath. All newly papered and painted throughout. Conveniences which are to be found in any modern house today—electricity, gas, hot air heater, water. Front porches of ample size and large bay-windows on second floor. A rear yard just big enough to be kept neat and attractive. With the touch of a housewife these dwellings can be made into real homes of comfort. Rents are very moderate. Location is good.

needs no watching

The modern Perfection

Oil Stove cooks merrily

away while you do other things

Put your roast or cake into the Perfection Oven, your vegetables on to boil. Set the flames high or low, to suit your cooking needs. They will not "creep up." You can trust them to remain as you set them, while you work in the garden, finish a dress, or do other things.

When you touch a match to the wick, cooking begins. A solid column of clean heat is driven full force right to the cooking.

Intense heat covers the entire cooking surface of the utensils. That's why food is always so thoroughly cooked on the Perfection Stove—and not just in spots.

The modern Perfection Oil Stoves have many improvements which put them far ahead of any other oil stoves in cooking satisfaction, beauty, and convenience. Only in the newest Perfections will you find the attractive new gray color harmony and porcelain enamel tops.

Back of these newest Perfections stands the satisfaction of more than 4,500,000 Perfection owners.

Mrs. DeGraf Says—

"The steadiness of the Perfection flame aids good cooking. You are certain of good results."

POLLYANNA

Some church members expect the choir to make good music when it isn't paid even a compliment.

Some men have the courage of their convictions, others are popular.

"Is he economical in the use of his car?"

"He certainly is. Why, half the time he is running around on two wheels and three cylinders, hunting for free parking spot."

"In order to subtract," said the teacher, "things have to be of the same denomination. You cannot take three apples from four pears nor eight marbles from ten buttons."

"Please," said the Bristol son, "couldn't you take three quarts of milk from two cows?"

When asked to sing, she coyly said, "With awful voice I'm blest."

She knew that she was right and when she sang so did the rest.

You can't convince a woman bridge player that silence is golden.

You may make hay while the sun shines, but it's sure to be raining when you go to gather it.

Jail Visitor—"What terrible crime has this man committed?"

Warden—"He didn't commit any crime at all; he was going down the street a few days ago and saw one man shoot another, and he is held as a material witness."

Visitor—"And where is the man who committed the murder?"

Warden—"Oh, he's out on bail."

All signs fail in dry weather, but no signs fail in a dry town.

"Has anything startling happened at the country club lately?"

"Yes, a couple of men from the country asked if they might join."

Over in London they have started a campaign to spell by sound. Over here, most of the stenographers spell that way, if at all.

Modern Young Man (after kissing a modern girl): "I'll be perfectly frank with you. You're not the first girl I've kissed by a long shot!"

Modern Young Girl: "And I'll be equally frank with you. You've got a great deal to learn, even at that!"

A woman's like a vehicle when she's a little sulky, and this applies to all of them, the lean or fat or bulky; and there's the newly married one, who calls her husband "Ducky!" She, too, is like a vehicle; she's just a little buggy.

He: "Do you smoke tobacco?"

She: "Did you ever hear of anyone smoking anything but tobacco?"

He: "Yes, I have an uncle who smokes hams!"

Most women seem to have achieved the permanent blush.

Young Brother: "Father, I think it's awful. The baby is ten months old and hasn't a tooth—and you a dentist."

He was one of nature's gentlemen, was the tramp, and his charming smile was his only asset.

"You look healthy enough," said the woman at the door. "Why not try to earn an honest living?"

"Appearances are deceptive," returned the other; and he smiled his wonder smile. "Might I add that you are charming and beautiful enough to grace the films, yet evidently you prefer the simple life?"

After a splendid meal, he raised his battered hat and took to the road once again.

What Is a Diuretic?

People Are Learning the Value of Occasional Use.

EVERYONE knows that a laxative stimulates the bowels. A diuretic performs a similar function to the kidneys. Under the strain of our modern life, our organs are apt to become sluggish and require assistance. More and more people are learning to use Doan's Pills, occasionally, to insure good elimination which is so essential to good health. More than 50,000 grateful users have given Doan's signed recommendations. Scarcely a community but has its representation. Ask your neighbor!

Matinee Ladies

"MATINEE LADIES," with May McAvoy, is a Warner Bros. picture of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, a poor college student, working as a dancing partner for rich women, falls in love with Sally Smith, a cigarette girl. She warns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitue of the roadhouse, who finds her "thrill" in "hunting" Bob; who, however, trusts her. She offers him free use of her secret apartment. Bob withholds consent until he can talk to Sally, who, meanwhile, is invited by Mazie Revere, a gold-digger, to a party with Mannion, a suitor favored by Mrs. Smith but not by Sally.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

"I met Tom Mannion socially," Mazie Revere explained to Sally, "through a very prominent business man. You know, honey, I meet some of the very best people."
"But—but—oh, I don't know, Mazie. It's awfully nice of you to ask me, and to ask Mr. Mannion for my sake, but—but—"
"The 'buts' have it!" teased Mazie. "A little bird whispered to me that your Mother likes Tom. And you ought to like him, too. So you just run along home, dearie, and think it over, and when Tom Mannion calls for you, just be ready to floss along. You'll be the belle of the ball!"
"Mazie, I haven't a thing to wear!"
"That wouldn't shock my guests none," grinned Mazie, escorting Sally to the door and sending her on her way with a merry little kiss and hug.

Sally made her way home in a confused state of mind. Sally was not cursed with an artful brain, so she saw nothing wrong in what had happened; nothing to suggest a frame-up. She was in a bit of a daze that she should be made the object of so much fuss suddenly. And what happened when she reached home hardly reduced that daze!

Her mother was waiting for her in the shabby dining room. Plunking her were the small Smith brothers, Sally could tell by the suppressed excitement in the attitude of the boys, and the belligerent glint in the eyes of her Mother, that something out of the ordinary was afoot.

Mrs. Smith anticipated her half-spoken question by suddenly bringing a big box from behind her back, and thrusting it forward to Sally, who accepted it with surprise and bewilderment.
"What is this, Mother?"
"Open it quick, and see!"
Sally undid the strings with trembling fingers. In her excitement she scarcely noticed the name of a prominent 57th Street modiste on the box; it meant nothing, in her state of mind, anyway.

Bewildered though she was, Sally could hardly restrain a cry of glad amazement when the uncovered box revealed a beautiful, modish evening gown; stockings of the sheerest chiffon, shimmering underlinings, "There's shoes, too! And a cape. In other boxes!" asserted the Mother.

"Good Heavens, Mother, who sent these?"
"Mr. Mannion!"
"What!" Sally's voice rose in anger and horror. "He sent them to me. Has he gone crazy, I cannot accept them, of course—they must go back at once—"
"Why can't you accept them?"
"Bristled the Mother. "He asked my permission to buy them, just like the nice gentleman he is. And I said all right and gave him your sizes and talked to the buyer who selected them for him!"

Sally was dangerously close to tears.
"Mother, are you out of your head? It's indecent, it's insane! I can't, I won't take these things from him!"

Mrs. Smith thrust her lantern jaw close to Sally's combed-honey head.
"Mr. Mannion is a fine man, and he means well by you. He got you these things so's he could take you to Miss Revere's party tonight. I shouldn't wonder if he's going to propose to you. You'll take these, and if he proposes, you'll take him!"
"I won't! I won't!" Sally Smith was little, but she could storm with all the fury of a great, big tigress in fighting for her own rights to virtue and decency.

"You'd rather run around with that pauper of a college boy!" shouted Mrs. Smith.
"Yes," cried Sally tearfully, "because I love him, and I could never love Mr. Mannion! Never! Never!"
Mrs. Smith changed her tactics; she grew wheedling. She was feminine enough to retain some knowledge of the instincts by which a woman's will can sometimes be undetermined.

"Try it on, anyway, Sally. See how it looks on you!"
"No," stamped Sally. "Never! I'll die before I let that dress, those things, touch me!"
The bell rang at this juncture, and the Smith brothers scrambled for the door. One, nimbler than the other, returned in an instant with the intelligence:

"It's the college boy, come to see Sally!"

Sally felt a quick catch in her heart. Why should Bob be calling unexpectedly like this? What had happened? And oh! dear, how embarrassing to be surprised in the midst of a family quarrel—surrounded with these telltale things.

There was not time to put the clothes away. He was coming in now. Sally hastily blew her nose, patted down her hair, tried to feel inwardly composed so that the angry color would quickly drain from her cheeks.

But as Bob strode in, she felt her face flaming higher. Her Mother was standing there so inquisitive, so nastily hostile. The boys were watching like two little rhinoceros.

One thing was in her favor, however; in his rapt anxiety to see Sally, Bob did not notice the fluff, garments strewn on the table. He nodded politely to Mrs. Smith; then his eyes returned to Sally's face without seeing anything or anybody else.

He was so obviously ill at ease in the Mother's presence, that the woman took his attitude as an insult and marched out stiffly; calling the boys in her wake.

Bob stepped close to Sally instantly, when they were alone.
"Why didn't you leave some message for me?" he asked. "I looked all around for you. The Madame said you had gone without saying a word. Did you forget that we were to ride home together?"

"Why, Bob, how strange! I was on an errand for Madame Leonine, and cautioned her to be sure to tell you that I couldn't wait for you because she had sent me away!"

"That's darn funny! She vowed that you hadn't said a word!"
"She just forgot, Bob, that's all; or was so busy she didn't know what she was saying. For why should I play such a dirty trick on you, I'd like to know?"

She smiled up at him so preciously, that Bob couldn't imagine for one moment why she should do anything to him that was not wholly sweet and dear and honorable. He shrugged and dismissed the matter of the crossed signals from his mind at once, in the eagerness to come to the real business of his visit.

"Let's sit down for a while, Sally. I want to talk to you."
Still he saw nothing; was conscious of nothing, in that room but her dear, dear eyes. He said softly, "You know, Sally, I do feel that I should talk over with you everything concerning my future. We do mean that much to each other, don't we?"

She nodded happily, and wondered what it was all about—and if there was any way she could get him out of the room before he saw the garments Mannion had sent to her.

And Bob, who had hurried to Sally full of the best intentions, suddenly found it exceedingly difficult to tell her what was in his mind; to explain in his minutest detail what Mrs. Hammond's proposition had been. Somehow he framed the first and most difficult words, stumbled haltingly through the introduction. Once started, he found it not so hard to narrate the full story. In fact, he warmed up to it; consciously making himself a partisan for it, deliberately placing himself before Sally in the light of a pleading counsel. He finished.

There was a long, long silence; in which Bob looked anxiously at Sally, and Sally continued to stare almost expressionless, certainly white of face, at Bob—a stare and directness she had never relaxed from after the first moment he had begun to speak.
